

Dear Shmuel,

Looks like the story my son has come to a happy ending, at least for now. His hair re-grew completely, and there are no signs of hair loss at the moment. We have not even used up the whole treatment - Adam's hair grew so much, that at the beginning of the third month there was no point to apply it anymore. The treatment was a success.

In my honesty I cannot prove that the re-growth occurred exclusively thanks to the Hair-Up. Doctors here say, that most probably hair would have re-grown anyway (interesting - first they advocated steroids and minoxidil). That does not convince me very much however, as I observed a large acceleration of the hair growth after application of your treatment. First 3 weeks gave no results and even some more hair-loss, but later the pace of growth was really impressive.

At the same time we supplemented Adam with magnesium and also some organic silicon, as these were the shortage elements in the spectrographic analysis of his hair which we had done. This also could have helped. Additionally, we exposed him very much to sun, particularly UVB (max exposure between 12-14 hrs), as we believed that vit D may also have to do with the problem. Altogether we got a result, which exceeded our expectations and I wish other parents to achieve such a happy result in such case.

Having said that I presume and I strongly believe, that your treatment was a key element in the process and I am very happy I came across it. I could not have spent my money better. I also think that your invention deserves a strong recommendation.

Once again please accept many thanks for your help, we all wish you best of luck with your work and research,
